No one wants to type on an ugly keyboard. While there are keyboards out there that go a bit overboard on themes, Google Keyboard likes to keep it simple. Always clean, always minimal. What you may not realize, however, is that it does have a few themes tucked inside its Settings menu. If you're running the newest version of Google Keyboard (5.0), accessing the Settings menu is the same as previous versions: long-press the comma (or whatever key is in that highlighted location below—it changes according to what app the input field is in), then tap "Google Keyboard settings." From there, all the visual settings are now nestled under "Preferences." Go ahead and tap that. The first entry in this menu is "Themes," and tapping that will open the selection box that now only has two options: Material Light and Material Dark. The Holo themes of previous versions are gone, which really makes sense as Google has been pushing Material for the past couple of years. Once you've made your selection, this box will disappear. There is one more customization method in this version of the Keyboard that wasn't available in previous versions, however: "Show key border." This puts a colored border between each key, giving them separation from each other. This is the perfect answer to the gripe many users have had about Google Keyboard's Material themes since the keyboard was released to the public. That's it—you're done. Back of this menu and enjoy your "new" keyboard. You'll type faster now, I promise. While it may seem trivial when it comes to overall functionality (the keyboard's performance and accuracy do not change with the theme), it's amazing how something small like a key border can help users become more accurate. It's all about jumping those mental barriers! Many Android phones these days come with fancy full-screen navigation gestures. Maybe you don't like them or you want to try the other options. We'll show you how to easily change the navigation buttons on Android. Unfortunately, not all Android phones put the navigation button settings in the same place. In this guide, we'll show you how it works for Samsung Galaxy and Google Pixel devices. Change Navigation Buttons on a Samsung Galaxy Phone First, on your Samsung Galaxy, swipe down once from the top of the screen and tap the gear icon. Next, select "Display" from the Settings menu. Scroll through the settings and tap "Navigation Bar" toward the bottom. Typically, Samsung Galaxy phones will have two choices: Buttons: Three buttons for "Recents," "Home," and "Back." Swipe Gestures: Swipe up to go Home, swipe up and hold for Recents, and swipe from the left or right to go Back. Additionally, you can tap "More Options" to customize the gestures. From here, you can add gesture bars to the three-button layout and adjust the gesture sensitivity. That's all there is to it for Samsung devices! Change Navigation Buttons on a Google Pixel Phone On a Google Pixel smartphone, first, swipe down twice from the top of the screen to reveal the Quick Settings toggles and tap the gear icon. Next, go to the "System" section in the Settings menu. Now, select "Gestures." The one that we want is "System Navigation." You'll have two navigation options to choose from: Gesture Navigation: Swipe up to go Home, swipe up and hold for Recents, and swipe from the left or right to go Back. 3-Button Navigation: Three buttons for "Recents," "Home," and "Back." Lastly, if you use Gesture Navigation, you can tap the gear icon to adjust the sensitivity of the Back gesture. That's all there is to it for Pixel phones! You can always be sure to use the most comfortable method for navigating your Android phone. Everyone has a different preference. RELATED: How to Stop Android Notifications from Popping up on Your Screen Most of the theming we talk about here on Android Central takes place on the home screen, so theming the launcher is important. It is not, however, the only area of your phone you can theme. Even without system-wide themes on TouchWiz, Sense UI and the like, it's possible — nay, easy — to theme many parts of your phone.So, let's get our theme on!While Google's Messenger app (opens in new tab) brings color to its conversations, the colors are random, and what's more, Messenger is ridiculously bright. Textra (opens in new tab) is one of the best SMS apps on Android, and one of its many touted features is its theme customization.Want a dark theme? Dark or AMOLED black, Textra's got you. Want to make your text bubbles circle, square, or somewhere in between? Textra's up for them all. Want to replace the manufacturer emoji you see with Google's emoji? Or iOS emoji? Textra's got some add-ons for just that.Textra's theming is about as close as you'll get to iMessage's look on Android, without the hassle of seeing green for non-Apple contacts. Textra's colors and shapes are quite customizable and allow you to match Textra to your theme, which is great because it means that when you use the Textra pop-up to reply to a text, it'll match the home screen it's being overlaid on.Download Textra (Free, $2.99) (opens in new tab)Twitter — TalonTalon (opens in new tab) is one of many great Twitter clients with a customizable layout and theme. Talon allows you to choose both a primary and accent color to your theme in addition to setting the light, dark or AMOLED black base theme. Another benefit here is the inclusion of a night mode, allowing you to use a brighter base theme during the day and a darker base theme during a user-set 'night' period.The themes, as well as the ability to customize your feed layouts and swipeable home pages, allows Talon to fit quite nicely into any theme and use case you could have for Twitter, from saved searches for your weekly live Tweets to checking on the latest tweets from your favorite AC nerds.Download Talon ($1.49) (opens in new tab)Dialer — Simpler DialerSimpler Dialer's (opens in new tab) ease of use and simple layout are what drew me to the app, but what drove me to buy Simpler Pro and use it over HTC's dialer were its recent caller ID feature and its themes.Simpler's themes are a bit more basic than Textra or Talon, but you can still take a dark theme and pick one of 40 theme colors. If you don't want your contacts without pictures being random colors, you can also set them to be a plain gray or your theme color.Download Caller ID and Dialer by Simpler (Free) (opens in new tab)File manager — Solid ExplorerSolid Explorer (opens in new tab) been my file manager for years thanks to its magnificent feature set, including the ability to stream my movies from Google Drive to MX Player.Solid Explorer's themes allow you to pick a primary color for the bars and icons, as well as an accent color for action buttons, subheaders, and progress bars. You can also customize the look of your icons.Download Solid Explorer (Free, $1.99) (opens in new tab)Weather — 1Weather1Weather (opens in new tab) been a constant in my theming articles for its widgets, which are easy to theme, but the app itself is themeable, too. 1Weather allows you to choose a backdrop for the app, as well as an accent color and either white or black icons. These would be even better if you could choose a dark theme akin to what 1Weather had before their Material Design update last year.Now, even if you choose dark icons and a dark background, you still have white cards to contend with in the app for any detailed information. Don't get me wrong, you can still get a weather app that fits your weather, your theme, and your life, but it may be a bit brighter than you wanted.Download 1Weather (Free, $1.99) (opens in new tab) There are a lot of ways that people like to paint the differences between an Android and an iPhone: Google vs. Apple, chaotic vs. organized, cheap vs. overpriced. To my mind, though, there's no better way to distinguish the two than by simply looking at their respective home screens. iPhone home screens used to all look the same — just a sea of app icons and a wallpaper — but even they are getting in on the fun with custom icons and home screen widgets these days.That said, while iPhone merely adopted home screen customization, Android was born in it, molded in it! If you're willing to take just a little bit of time, you can make the home screen of your Android phone look like anything you want.I'm prone to spending hours and hours fine-tuning detailed themes and trying to get things set up just so — much to the dismay of my editors — but don't worry, you don't need hours to make your phone uniquely yours. You just need a spark of creativity and a few of the assets from my robust theming toolbox.Android theming Wallpapers set the toneSource: Ara Wagoner / Android Central (Image credit: Source: Ara Wagoner / Android Central)The fastest way to personalize your phone is also the simplest: getting rid of that stock wallpaper that came pre-loaded and getting something new. Wallpaper apps are plentiful whether you're wanting a new wallpaper every day or just want to find that perfect one and keep it forever. There are a few wallpaper apps I'm more fond of these days:Tapet (opens in new tab) — Tapet generates a one-of-a-kind wallpaper that combines one of its hundred designs and a color scheme that's either randomly chosen or hand-picked by you. Tapet even has a Quick Settings toggle you can use to re-do the wallpaper whenever you get bored of it, or it can automatically swap to a new wallpaper every day or every hour.Google Wallpapers (opens in new tab) — Want a daily wallpaper from one of several different collections? Google Wallpapers is for you, and while some of the more unique wallpapers are saved for the Google Pixel line of smartphones, there's still plenty of walls here to choose from.Backdrops (opens in new tab) — This wallpaper app offers up walls from hundreds of artists in dozens of different styles, from minimal styles to epic tableaus to a meme or two. There's also a nice collection of wallpapers here for Halloween, Christmas, and other major holidays.KLWP (opens in new tab) — This app goes beyond just being a pretty wall for you to look at; KLWP allows you to make full-blown phone themes with animations, built-in widgets, and controls. There's a bit of a learning curve to KLWP, but once you get going with it, KLWP can let you swap between themes in mere seconds.And nothing says that you have to go to some new app to find a great wallpaper — websites and social media are rife with them, too! Sometimes I'll just get lost in the black hole known as Reddit looking at fantastic wallpapers in food and nature communities.Source: Ara Wagoner / Android Central (Image credit: Source: Ara Wagoner / Android Central)If you don't know what a widget is, don't worry! You see that clock and weather readout that came pre-installed on your home screen? That's a widget. Widgets come a myriad of styles and purposes, and they exist so that you can avoid opening the full app while still getting helpful information — like checking the weather or hitting pause on your music.Source: Ara Wagoner / Android Central (Image credit: Source: Ara Wagoner / Android Central)I love widgets because they make my home screen more useful, and if an app does its widget right, it makes your home screen beautiful as well as functional. Most popular apps have some form of widget, especially productivity apps like Google Keep, Todoist, and Outlook. Most music and podcast apps will come with a widget to control playback — but most of those are ugly, which is why I am eternally grateful to third party music widgets.If you're willing to go the extra mile to get a widget that fits your style and your needs perfectly, take a look at KWGT, a What-You-See-Is-What-You-Get widget creator that allows you to create just about any widget you can think of. It can seem overwhelming at first, but if you go Pro, you can import widget presets made by other users that are shared on theming communities or published on Google Play as KWGT packs (opens in new tab).Android theming Icon packs give consistency and styleSource: Andrew Myrick / Android Central (Image credit: Source: Andrew Myrick / Android Central)Android app icons are all different sizes with all different styles, which can be annoying when you want a consistent look to your phone. We'd hoped that we'd finally get a more uniform look when adaptive icons were introduced with Android Oreo back in 2017, but nope — developers and manufacturers still do whatever they want for app icons.This is what icon packs were made for: to replace the chaos with something consistent, clearly recognizable, and even cute.Icon packs come in a million different styles — from clean Whicons (opens in new tab) to more unique concoctions like Ombre (opens in new tab) and ENIX (opens in new tab) — but these days I've moved beyond searching for icon packs to fit my different themes to building my own icon packs in Icon Pack Studio, an awesome little icon mask creator developed by the team behind one of my favorite launchers, Smart Launcher 5 (opens in new tab).Android theming Launchers upgrade your interfaceSource: Ara Wagoner / Android Central (Image credit: Source: Ara Wagoner / Android Central)The app that you use to organize your home screens and access your apps is called the launcher. Your phone came with a basic launcher pre-installed, but if you want to take advantage of icon packs from Google Play (or other important features like customizable gestures, launcher backups, subgrid positioning, and more), you'll need to upgrade to a better launcher. Thankfully, there are hundreds to choose from.There are launchers that are focused on speed and productivity — such as the singularly laid-out Niagara Launcher (opens in new tab) — and launchers that leave everything up to the user like Nova Launcher (opens in new tab) and Action Launcher (opens in new tab). I personally use Smart Launcher 5 (opens in new tab) most of the time; the categorized app drawer makes it easier to find apps among the hundreds my phone has accumulated, and I like the double-tap shortcut available to hide a second app behind each app on your home screen.Android theming Dark themes are cool againSource: Ara Wagoner / Android Central (Image credit: Source: Ara Wagoner / Android Central)With Android 10 came the addition of a system-wide dark theme for all Android phones, rather than a patchwork dark theme for some system apps on some Android phones. It was a long time coming, and I may have shed some happy tears when it finally stuck around after getting pulled during Developer Previews three years in a row.I leave the dark theme on all the time — it's easier on my eyes and my soul — but it's something that some people like to turn on and off as their day progresses. In the upcoming Android 11, you'll be able to schedule dark mode to turn on automatically at night, but if you have a Samsung phone, you can schedule it right now.Android theming Sounds help avoid confusion and monotonySource: Android Central (Image credit: Source: Android Central)There's a Broadway adage that goes "Nobody leaves the theater humming the scenery". No matter what your home screen or app drawer looks like, the part of your phone's customization that you'll notice the most and be reminded of most throughout your day isn't your wallpaper or your icon pack: it's your ringtone and notification sounds.Every call, every text, every so-called "breaking news" alert and alarm is accompanied by a sound, and while there are people who are still using the same old tired "Whistle" from the Galaxy S3, I know we can do better. Look through the ringtones and notification sounds that came with your phone!If there are some unique sounds that came with your phone, that's great. If not, we can fix that, too! New ringtones and text tones are something you can find a myriad of places (Zedge has millions of sound effects, song clips, and memes that you can download and set in seconds), but also search through your music library for songs that fit as ringtones for your closest friends and family. Sound effects libraries can give you the most bizarre and unique text tones so that you can distinguish between a Slack message, an Instagram DM, and a work email.After all, nothing will get you to answer the phone faster than hearing the Psycho theme when your mother-in-law calls.Source: Ara Wagoner / Android CentralThere are millions of ways to make your phone look new and fun and unique, but if you want some suggestions for fun home screen setups, here are a few of my favorites:Combine Tapet (opens in new tab) with Icon Pack Studio and Smart Launcher 5 (opens in new tab). Tapet can auto-refresh a new wallpaper every hour or every day, and if you set Icon Pack Studio to pull colors from the icon pack, you can wake up to a totally new wallpaper every day with icons that are perfectly matched to it.Want a more involved theme? I've built dozens for Android Central over the years, and you can find them all right here!Summer Essentials: Apply this geometric wallpaper, the Lux Light icon pack (opens in new tab), and add the round music widget from Melodi for Kustom (opens in new tab) using KWGT Pro (opens in new tab). Feels like a pool party, even though pools are all closed this summer!The best part of theming, in my humble opinion, is just playing around with it and seeing what works, so get creative and see what wonderful widget and wallpaper combos you can come up with! You can just stick to organizing the setup you have with some folders, or you can completely revolutionize your home screen. It's all up to you!Read more: How I arrived at the perfect Android theming setup — and how to build your own
